The cadets were guided about the route to the naval swimming pool with 20 SW cadets from both the units, 1DGBn and 2DGBn, present. Our cadets were taken aback by the panoramic view of the blue waters of the swimming pool. After a small briefing by the dynamic and prodigious scuba diving instructor, Ms Archana Sardana, who is India's first and only female BASE jumper, a certified skydiver (one of the only four licenced women skydivers in the country), the founder of the 'Archana Sardana Scuba Diving Academy', a mountaineer, and a TEDx speaker. The squad was divided into two groups—one of the swimmers, and the other, of non-swimmers. The three cadets went together in one lot, and they snorkelled with the snorkels first and then practised breathing with the air tanks by the side of the pool. They donned the black BCDs, or Buoyancy Control Devices, and set off with their kind, inspiring, and amazing instructor to dive along the edges of the pool. They swam their way in the hazy blues as if just about to land up at the Mariana Trench.

After completing their round, Cdt Manisha and Urvi did another lap of the pool to retrieve a piece of weight that had fallen by mistake. Afterwards, the six cadets in the lot posed for photos, both in groups and individually.
